The No Numbers Money Talk

For financially successful families, parents often find it difficult to engage the next generation about the wealth they have accumulated. The good news is that, with the right approach and tools, it is possible to have a conversation with your family about money without getting into the dollars and cents—which can lead to a much healthier and productive discussion.

Join CAPTRUST and family wealth leadership coaches Legacy Capitals for a webinar to provide parents and grandparents with practical tools and resources to help foster successful discussions around philanthropy, what happens in case of an emergency, and communicating your legacy. Webinar attendees will learn:

- How to start the conversation about wealth, without referring to dollars and cents
- Practical ways to engage the next generation on the challenges of wealth
- How to have meaningful conversations with the family about instilling a culture of giving
